

Massachusetts Learning Centers

There are a growing number of learning centers in MA helping to educate the exodus of students leaving public schools. A learning center is a service for homeschooling parents who desire homeschooling support for their children. Often hosted by churches, learning centers provide a place for homeschool students to go outside of the home during the school day to receive supplemental instruction from tutors on certain subjects, interact in a social environment with homeschool peers, and potentially participate in extracurricular activities as well. While learning centers supplement parent-directed education they do not displace parents as the primary educators of their homeschooling children.
